Your role with the Higher Self

The concept of the human being as "boots on the ground" for the higher self is a powerful and thought-provoking idea.

The Human as a Vehicle: In this context, the human body and personality can be seen as a vehicle or a vessel for the higher self to express itself in the physical world. The higher self is often considered to be a more refined, spiritual aspect of our being, which has a broader perspective and a deeper understanding of the universe.

The Role of the Human: As "boots on the ground," the human being is responsible for anchoring the higher self's energies and intentions in the physical world. This means that we, as humans, have the power to manifest the desires and goals of our higher self through our thoughts, emotions, and actions.

Free Will and Choice: However, this concept also raises questions about free will and choice. If we are simply "boots on the ground" for our higher self, do we truly have control over our decisions and actions? Or are we simply following a predetermined script or divine plan?

Co-Creation and Partnership: One way to approach this idea is to see the human and higher self as co-creators or partners in the manifestation process. The higher self provides guidance, wisdom, and inspiration, while the human being brings the physical and emotional aspects of creation into being.

Responsibility and Accountability: This perspective also emphasizes the importance of taking responsibility and accountability for our actions and choices. As "boots on the ground," we must be mindful of the impact our decisions have on ourselves and the world around us, and strive to align our actions with the higher self's intentions.

Do you see yourself as "boots on the ground" for your higher self, and if so, how do you navigate the relationship between your human and higher aspects?
